2 DISTRICT OF PUERTO RICO

EDDA M. AGUIRRE-SANTOS, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

PFIZER PHARMACEUTICALS, LLC,

Defendant.

Civil No. 12-1393 (JAF)

6 OPINION AND ORDER

7 We are asked to determine whether an employer's severance-benefits package
8 established an employee welfare benefit plan within the meaning of the Employee 9 Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), 29 U.S.C. § 1001-1461.I.

10 I.

11 Background

12 The plaintiffs filed suit in Commonwealth court to reinstate certain wage and 13 benefit claims that the defendant had allegedly required them to dismiss with prejudice.
14 (Docket 1 at 2.) The defendants intend to defend against that claim on the basis of the 15 plaintiffs' severance package, which they allege the plaintiffs accepted voluntarily on 16 condition that they dismiss any pending claims against the defendant. The defendant
17 timely removed the case under federal question jurisdiction. (Id.). The plaintiffs moved 18 to remand their case to Commonwealth court. (Docket No. 9.) The defendant asserts that 19 removal was proper because the severance package that forms the basis of their defense is

1 a plan governed by ERISA, a federal statute. The plaintiffs disagree. We granted the 2 plaintiffs' motion to remand. (Docket No. 23.) The defendants moved for 3 reconsideration. (Docket No. 26.) We granted, in part, the motion for reconsideration.
4 (Docket No. 33.)

7 A. Motion to Remand

8 “Any civil action of which the district courts have original jurisdiction founded on 9 a claim or right arising under the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States shall 10 be removable without regard to the citizenship or residence of the parties.” 28 U.S.C.
11 § 1441(b); Rosello-Gonzalez v. Calderon-Serra, 398 F.3d 1, 10 (1st 2004). Once a suit 12 has been removed from state court, the case is to be remanded if it was “removed 13 improvidently and without jurisdiction.” Ochoa Realty Corp. v. Faria, 815 F.2d 812, 815 14 (1st Cir. 1987) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c)). For purposes of this statute, Puerto Rico is 15 equivalent to a state. Id. “A district court confronted with a matter of subject matter 16 jurisdiction reviews a plaintiff's complaint not to judge the merits, but to determine 17 whether the court has authority to proceed.” BIW Deceived v. Local Union S6, Indus.
18 Union of Marine & Shipbldg. Workers. Of Amer., IAMAW Dist. Lodge 4, 123 F.3d 824, 19 832 (1st Cir. 1997).

20 B. Employee Benefits Plans Under ERISA

21 ERISA aims to protect employees from losing their pensions and benefits due to 22 employer mismanagement. Massachusetts v. Morash, 490 U.S. 107, 112 (1989). ERISA

1 applies to “any employee benefit plan if it is established or maintained...by any employer
2 engaged in commerce or in any industry or activity affecting commerce.” 29
3 U.S.C. § 1002(3)(a)(1). Whether a benefit scheme qualifies as a plan under ERISA is a
4 mixed question of law and fact. Gross v. Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 2013
5 WL4305006 (1st Cir. 2013). Because “[t]he text of ERISA itself affords scant guidance
6 as to what constitutes a covered ‘plan,’” Belanger v. Wyman–Gordon Co., 71 F.3d 451,
7 454 (1st Cir.1995), we look to case precedent in deciding whether a plan exists. No
8 single factor or list of factors is determinative, although some factors tend to be more 9 indicative of a plan than others, including an employer’s ongoing administrative or 10 financial obligations. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co., Inc. v. Baig, 166 F.3d 1, 3 (1st 11 Cir. 1999). Provisions for severance pay may constitute an employee welfare benefit
12 plan within the meaning of ERISA. See Belanger, 71 F.3d at 456; see also Scott v. Gulf 13 Oil Corp., 754 F.2d 1499, 1503 (9th Cir.1985). ERISA’s preemption of state laws should 14 be construed broadly, Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux, 481 U.S. 41, 45-46, (1987), and the 15 First Circuit has stated that such preemption extends to state common-law causes of 16 action as well as regulatory laws. Zipperer v. Raytheon Co., Inc., 493 F.3d 50, 53 (1st 17 Cir. 2007). Finally, when deciding whether the employer created or maintained an 18 employee benefit plan, the court should consider the facts and circumstances from the 19 perspective of a reasonable employee. Belanger, 71 F.3d at 455. (citing Johnson v. Watts 20 Regular Co., 63 F.3d 1129, 1135 (1st Cir. 1995)).

The question presented is whether the severance benefits offered to the plaintiffs constitute an employee benefit plan governed by the terms of ERISA, thus providing federal subject matter jurisdiction. We find that the benefits do not constitute a plan.

An employee benefit plan exists if an arrangement between an employee and an employer requires an ongoing administrative program. Fort Halifax Packing Co., Inc. v. Coyne, 482 U.S. 1, 11 (1987). Two principles guide our inquiry: (1) whether an employer retains discretion in administering the severance agreement, and (2) whether benefits are provided on a regularly occurring basis or on a single occasion. See Rodowicz v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 192 F.3d 162, 170 (1st Cir. 1999).

Pfizer’s predecessor, Wyeth, established the Plan in March of 2008. The Plan is open to “virtually all full-time employees, with the exception of certain categories of employees set forth in the plan document.” (Docket 8-1 at 6-7.) In order to receive compensation, an employee must have been involuntarily terminated as a result of: (1) a reduction in work force; (2) job elimination; (3) job restructuring; or (4) discontinuance or relocation of operations. (Id.) Additionally, employees must also: (1) execute a written waiver of all claims arising out of the employee’s employment with Wyeth; (2) return all company property; (3) hold confidential all proprietary information; (4) not engage in any activity that, in the company’s sole discretion, amounts to gross misconduct; (5) continue to be employed through the date assigned by Pfizer as the employee’s “work through” or termination date. (Id. at 13.)

1 Pfizer may deny an employee severance benefits for: (1) failing to satisfactorily 2 perform the duties of employment through his or her “termination date,” and 3 (2) termination for cause, as determined by the company in its sole discretion. (Id. at 35.)
4 Under the Plan’s provisions, an employee is determined to be terminated “for cause” for 5 a variety of acts—including theft, lying, gross negligence—but may be for any reason
6 that the “Plan Administrator, in its sole discretion, shall deem appropriate.” (Id.) Here, 7 unlike in Simas v. Quaker Fabric Corp. of Fall River, 6 F.3d 849 (1st Cir. 1999), the “for 8 cause” determination happens once, up front, largely governed by specific criteria. While 9 not a rote algorithm, the Plan does not require the administrator to make exclusion 10 determinations over time. Cf. Id. (ongoing administrative mechanism needed to 11 determine whether an employee discharged for cause is otherwise ineligible for 12 unemployment compensation under Massachusetts law). Under the Plan, the 13 determination of an employee’s eligibility is not the kind of ongoing administrative 14 discretion that ERISA governs.

15 Much like in Fort Halifax, where the purported plan offered “a temporary ‘one-16 time only’ lump sum payment,” the Plan disburses pre-determined benefit payments over 17 twelve, twenty-six or fifty-two weeks. The amount of transition benefit compensation 18 paid to an eligible employee is calculated according to an employee’s base salary and 19 years of service. (Docket 8-1 at 14-16.) While the First Circuit has held previously that 20 an employee benefit plan involving a single payment may be considered an employee 21 benefit plan for ERISA purposes when eligibility is based on at least “one non-22 mechanical criterion, over a prolonged period,” Belanger, 71 F.3d at 455, n.2, here,

1 however, there is nothing discretionary about the timing, amount or form of the payment.
2 Sending a terminated employee a check every month plus continuing to pay his insurance 3 premiums for the time specified in the employment contract does not rise to the level of 4 an ongoing administrative scheme.

5 Because the severance benefit scheme is not a “plan” governed by ERISA, the 6 plaintiffs’ claim does not present a federal question. We lack jurisdiction to resolve this 7 dispute.

8 IV.

9 Conclusion

10 For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs’ motion to remand proceedings to Guayama
11 Superior Court, (Docket No. 9), is GRANTED.
